	No statement from Specialized or Cannondale yet that they won't do this? If the big 4 go this way the whole industry will. Aug 5, 2015 12:33pm · © Chris [
	Aug 5, 2015 12:31pm · Chris Witek · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike what about the fact that many many people do their own maintenance? i for one can build from scratch
Consultation	including wheels and lets be honest most people arent going to need to screw with a headset or bottom bracket for more then 5 years, havent needed specialty tools totally more then 40 bucks in years. the lack of profit from a bike sale will def hurt, the comission has to be a lot to be honest in my opinion. Aug 5, 2015 11:07am · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
*	Jamie Bate · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//accell-na-opens Aug 5, 2015 11:05am · 6
	Greg Mixson · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike If you're a small dealer and don't already have Ascend this will cost you $14,000 the first year, from what I hear. Aug 5, 2015 10:58am · ❸
	Ellen Butler • Commented on http://www.bicvcleretailer.com//sram-teams-retailers Find War of (1) 6 mill roung this summer. As we are an excuse (2) Aug 5, 2015 9:17am • (3)
	Mike Jacoubowsky · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike Alan Lepak Consider the added point of customer contact a "Super Concierge" service. It's taking the online sale to the next level. You place the order and someone who's a specialist in not just sizing but the cycling opportunities in your area reaches out to you to make sure your transaction is perfect! An appointment could be made for coming in for a fitting, if needed.
	It's not a new model, it's an evolution, a successful blending, of the best of the brick & mortar and on-line world. It's offering something up that the Canyon pure on-line plays can't match. And you and I and probably many others have proven that it works.
	But nobody's written articles about us in BRAIN. Guess it's not controversial enough. Nobody's picked up on this in the various on-line marketing publications and forums either. Probably because it's not something to argue about, so it doesn't create massive interest like this "The Sky is Falling" story and subsequent outpouring of polarized posturing. But it works. It's not rocket science. It doesn't take two years to figure out how to do it. Just a desire to drop the animosity towards all-things-online and make the best of the new technologies and stop fighting the way many people want to shop. Aug 5, 2015 7:47am · · · · View Thread Mike Ernst · Commented on Electra co-founder back in the bike business Amos Brumble · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike Really is any dealer/industry person here at all surprised about this?
	If shops become more service focused and mechanics need actual training rather than just thrown bikes to assemble and see who can do it what will happen? Maybe better service, fewer sales people and less need for prime retial space or large locations all together. I see some real pluses to the person who wants to open a new shop.
	With an existing shop their may need to be a plan "B" as this trend moves to other vendors. Aug 5, 2015 6:27am ⋅ ② Ewere Destiny ⋅ Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike Tony Lederman can you deal with someone in Nigeria? Aug 5, 2015 5:27am · · · · View Thread Frances Tsai Peterman · Commented on Electra co-founder back in the bike business
	Aug 5, 2015 2:37am • © Christian Frank • Commented on Electra co-founder back in the bike business
	Aug 4, 2015 10:35pm · ② Paul Linden · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//accell%E2%80%99s Didn't Specialized try something similar with p and a around 12 years ago? Aug 4, 2015 5:42pm · ③
	Joe Fas · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike It's no different than when the LBS sells an ill-fitting bike to someone because it's what they have in stock and don't want to waste money on a stagnant floor plan. Aug 4, 2015 2:46pm · 🚳 · View Thread Marcos Adami · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike Thats the future Aug 4, 2015 2:33pm · ② do	Frederick Landry · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike Days are near where the big ones will sell online and offer leasing in a Tesla/Car based business model. The big ones will eventually bypass shops. Aug 4, 2015 2:32pm · @ Kingsbury's Cyclery · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike Remember when the bike business used to be fun ? Aug 4, 2015 2:20pm · ⊚
	Brooks Slama · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike How long until you buy a Trek at Wally's? Aug 4, 2015 2:05pm · @
	Kaj Grönholm · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike James Merrill A bit more than that, here in Boulder it's about $2 million per year in total taxes collected at the register from bike shops Aug 4, 2015 2:00pm · ○ · View Thread
	Troy Wolens · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike really what was that?i never had one reason Aug 4, 2015 1:42pm · ② · View Thread
3	Troy Wolens · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike All you trek dealers can get used to32% margin.Now at least you dont have to stock anything above 1,000$. Another great way to help the dealer.bye the way will trek pay you for the first check up? take that cost off the top.And,take the tax off! Bottom line no reason to go to your store. Aug 4, 2015 1:38pm · @
	David Wilson · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike This was inevitable. As the article points out online bike retailers are cutting substantially into LBS sales. Sometimes I wonder how a LBS stays in business. Many of us try to support our LBS for nostalgic and sentimental reasons. It's the same decision as to whether to shop at Walmart or give your business to a small mom and pop store. As we all know, items ordered on line are almost always significantly much less expensive than purchasing from a brick and mortar LBS for obvious reasons (employee salary, overhead, etc.). I suppose it's up to us the consumer, whether we're willing to pay more for the personalized service of a LBS or if cost and saving money is of paramount concern. It's a controversial debate for sure but since we live in a capitalistic society the market place will ultimately decide the fate of the LBS. Aug 4, 2015 1:26pm · @ Transier Control	Jack Flanders · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike Remember the car programs where you could order a Volvo, Sabb or Mercedes, pick it up in Europe, drive around for your vacation, drop it off at a port and they would ship it to the USA and with the required USA emissions gear? The savings would pay for your vacation! How about you order your bike, specify a bike shop that works a major ride like Ragbrai (Harpers, Bike World, etc), the shop gets the bike, assembles it and has it ready to go when you get to the ride. After the ride is over, the bike shop boxes it and ships it to your home with minimal assembly required then. For ride participants who are spending $200+ to get their bike to the ride & back, this could work. Or, oops, you get to the ride and Trek didn't have what you ordered, it got crushed by the gorillias at fedex, it was defective, the shop was overwhelmed and didn't have time or whatever, yeah, order well in advance. What if a order goes in for a bike the local dealer already has in stock. Trek should know what bikes they sent to each dealer previously but it would be up to the dealer to keep up to date with sold bikes. Will Trek provide current inventory tracking for each dealer or notify the dealer to check inventory and to supply the blike themselves for imediate delivery? A local dealer can't possibly stock everything and many get stuck with old stock they would love to sell off at full price. What about end of season sales events? Does the dealer take a commission cut on those sales?
	Aug 4, 2015 12:59pm · Matthew Snow · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike 80% of their normal comission? What dealer wants to make less $? Good for other companies that have higher margins for their LBS! Trek has tried this before and it wasn't successful.Just saying Aug 4, 2015 12:48pm · Aug 4, 2015 12:48pm · Aug 5. 2015 12:48pm · Aug 6. 2015 12:48pm · Aug 7. 2015 12:48pm · Aug 8. 2015 12:48pm · Aug 8. 2015 12:48pm · Aug 9.
	Aug 4, 2015 12:48pm · James Merrill · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike That'll probably make .0000001% difference in the grand scheme of tax revenue Aug 4, 2015 12:43pm · · View Thread
	Aug 4, 2015 12:43pm · ℯ · View Thread Jack Flanders · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike Can I order epo on line? Aug 4, 2015 12:39pm · ℯ · View Thread Brian Peterson · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike The issues I see without knowing Trek's terms in their dealer agreement 1) Margins are based on volume. Now, as a dealer, am I expected to commit to the same level of bikes on the floor knowing that I may lose some of those sales to online? Yes, the dealer still gets a cut, but to maintain your current volume based margins, you still have to carry a large number of bikes. the floor knowing that I may lose some of those sales to online? Yes, the dealer still gets a cut, but to maintain your current volume based margins, you still have to carry a large number of bikes. 2) Parts and accessories going direct to the consumer. That's one of the few areas left where a shop can still make money. Yes, the shop gets a cut But, which shop? The one that is geographically closer to the buyer? Plus, will the money given to a shop on P&A be the same margin? Especially since Trek surely doesn't pay the same price on stuff like Park Tools that I do doesn't pay the same price on stuff like Park Tools that I do At the very least, this would have me reconsidering where I would invest my inventory dollars I would probably stock fewer high dollar bikes and invest in more demo bikes to help drive those sales back towards my shop Aug 4, 2015 11:57am ·
	Aug 4, 2015 11:57am ·
	Scott Dunwoody · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike now is the time for all trek dealers to drop them!!!! Aug 4, 2015 11:52am · ⊚
	Corey Horning · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike It is something they can sign up for. So i'm assuming not all will be and won't sign up for it. This is a huge step. You can make assumptions now but we'll have to see how it turns out Aug 4, 2015 11:27am · 🚱 · View Thread
À	Tony Lederman · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike The dealer will be stuck with the product and have to order a replacement. Aug 4, 2015 11:24am · ❸ · View Thread
	Bob Albrecht · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike So I get the idea of trying to get into the online game and attempt to maintain some sort of dealer participation and profit but the biggest reason people go online is PRICE! And who pays retail for bikes? Why would Mr. Customer pay MORE at Trek than in a store? As to accessories; yes it sucks that Trek might try to steal those sales from us, but again, who is going to pay more (online) than on other sites (wiggle, PBK, Chain Reac, etc) or even instore? Sure the Bonti stuff is protected, but again, why pay retail when there is some dealer who's hungry? The Certified service thing? I get it, especially in large markets, but the cost is rediculous. The ROI would take several years for small-mid size markets Of course if the Trek Direct takes off, we'll just be service centers anyway
	The Connect program looks interesting and it actually pencils outand gets customers back into your store. Aug 4, 2015 11:22am ⋅
	Eric Fagerlund · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike Just remember that the best online brands convert an average of 18% of their traffic at ecomm. Still a huge market for the IBDs. I also can't see someone buying a high end bike cutting out their local shop. Aug 4, 2015 11:15am · @
	Marc Sheehan · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike And now the relevancy of Interbike for most fades even further. Aug 4, 2015 11:11am · ❷ · View Thread
CS	Crankjoy · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike Wow, it will be very interesting to see how the other bike companies react to this move. I can see the emails from those other companys flooding the inboxes of their retailers now Aug 4, 2015 11:08am · @
FOXIROT WHEEL & EDGE	Foxtrot Wheel & Edge · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//blue-cycle-transitions Glad to have Blue back in the shop! 2015 has been a great year with Blue and 2016 looks even better with more models and great pricing. Keep it up guys! Aug 4, 2015 11:05am · @
	Ron Hequet · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike I have several IBD clients across the U.S. (some of the most profitable by %), as well as in 20 other industries. And having owned 2 retail companies myself, I believe this on-line move will have a negative effect, 'long term' on the IBD. It's true that one of the most profitable areas of the business is service and have been working with clients to grow that part of their business, as I did with mine. Going forward, inventory management will be a challenge. The inventory ordered via Spring dating programs will be reduced. On-site product options for the customer will be diminished and at some point there will have to be a reduction in sales staff. Many IBD's offer custom fitting for free or a reduced fee, if the customer buys a bike at their shop. Will customers still expect that opportunity with an on-line bike purchase, since it's being delivered by that dealer? There may be a plan by Trek to address the concerns with fit and exchanges that others have mentioned here, but it wasn't in the article. Business owners need to beging preparing strategy and a business plan for the effects of this launch. Aug 4, 2015 10:53am · 💮
	Randy Pittaluga · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike What about Electra bikes does not mention them? Aug 4, 2015 10:52am · €
	Jim Thurman · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike I did the same after 25 years. Tired of them wanting to know every detail of my business and how I run it. Unfortunately, I'm sure the other brands will follow shortly and then the next step is just direct sales and videos to show the consumer how to assemble the bike. Aug 4, 2015 10:50am · ❸ · View Thread Mike Jacoubowsky · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike You said it exactly right- how will these programs evolve. Nothing is set in stone. The dealer remains the customer (for now), and it's up to dealers to let their suppliers know their preferences. What they like, wha they don't. Some dealers do in fact like the program as Trek laid out. I'm sure they're letting Trek know.
	And those who don't, I'm sure are doing the same. Trek can't be all things to all people; no matter what they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. $ \text{Aug 4, 2015 10:43am} \cdot $
	they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately.
	they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10:43am · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
	they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10:43am · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
	they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10:43am · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
	they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10:43am · • · View Thread Mike Jacoubowsky · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike I think Trek is 100% correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The 'net is not going to go away, nor will people change their ways and once again have large chunks of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are busy and we've become "interrupt driven" with little chunk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, why not wrap it up then? It's crazy to fight that. But if I look over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my SmartE shopping cart, every one of which I intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, 70% of those bikes became something else. Different size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to ride. And that's what makes the difference between actually buying something on-line vs in the store. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Aug 4, 2015 10:39am · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
	they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10:43am · 🚱 · View Thread Mike Jacoubowsky · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike I think Trek is 100% correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The 'net is not going to go away, nor will people change their ways and once again have large chunks of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are busy and we've become "interrupt driven" with little chunk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, why not wrap it up then? It's crazy to fight that. But if I look over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my SmartE shopping cart, every one of which I intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, 70% of those bikes became something else. Different size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to ride. And that's what makes the difference between actually buying something on-line vs in the store. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Aug 4, 2015 10:39am · 🚱 Ross McNamara · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike If bike shops carry less inventory, the excitement created by staff and shared with the consumer will be eroded. Pictures of bikes don't sell bikes, consumers touching and riding bikes in shops drives the industry. There needs to be a balance, I just hope this does not lead to manufacturer owned brick and mortar stores like you see in other industries. The overall industry will suffer and margins will go away. Aug 4, 2015 10:35am · 🚱
	they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10:43am · 🕲 · View Thread Mike Jacoubowsky · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike I think Trek is 100% correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The 'net is not going to go away, nor will people change their ways and once again have large chunks of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are busy and we've become "interrupt driven" with little chunk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, why not wrap it up then? It's crazy to fight that. But if I look over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my SmartE shopping cart, every one of which I intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, 70% of those bikes became something else. Different size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to ride. And that's what makes the difference between actually buying something on-line vs in the store. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Aug 4, 2015 10:39am · 🕲 Ross McNamara · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike If bike shops carry less inventory, the excitement created by staff and shared with the consumer will be eroded. Pictures of bikes don't sell bikes, consumers touching and riding bikes in shops drives the industry. There needs to be a balance, I just hope this does not lead to manufacturer owned brick and mortar stores like you see in other industries. The overall industry will suffer and margins will go away. Aug 4, 2015 10:35am · 🕲 John Denson · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike I've always said, diversify your options as a retailer. This is the beginn-online-bike Will trek be "sold out
	they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10:43am · · · · · · View Thread Mike Jacoubowsky · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike I think Trek is 100% correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The 'net is not going to go away, nor will people change their ways and once again have large chunks of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are busy and we've become 'interrupt driven' with little chunk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, why not wrap it up then? It's crazy to fight that. But if I look over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my SmartE shopping cart, every one of which I intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, 70% of those bikes became something else. Different size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to ride. And that' what makes the difference between actually buying something on-line vs in the store. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Aug 4, 2015 10:39am · · · · Ross McNamara · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike If bike shops carry less inventory, the excitement created by staff and shared with the consumer will be eroded. Pictures of bikes don't sell bikes, consumers touching and riding bikes in shops drives the industry. There needs to be a balance, I just hope this does not lead to manufacturer owned brick and mortar stores like you see in other industries. The overall industry will suffer and margins will go away. Aug 4, 2015 10:35am · · · · John Denson · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike What about the local sales tax that is usually collected from an in store sale? Does this mean the loc
	they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10:43am * ® * View Thread Mike Jacoubowsky * Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike I think Trek is 100% correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The 'net is not going to go away, nor will people change their ways and once again have large chunks of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are busy and we've become "interrupt driven" with little chunk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, why not wrap it up then? It's crazy to fight that. But if I look over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my SmartE shopping cart, every one of which I intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, 70% of those bikes became something else. Different size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to ride. And that' what makes the difference between actually buying something on-line vis in the store. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Aug 4, 2015 10:39am * ® Ross McNamara * Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike If bike shops carry less inventory, the excitement created by staff and shared with the consumer will be eroded. Pictures of bikes don't sell bikes, consumers touching and riding bike in shops drives the industry. There needs to be a balance, I just hope this does not lead to manufacturer owned brick and mortar stores like you see in other industries. The overall industry will suffer and margins will go away. Aug 4, 2015 10:35am * ® John Denson * Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike What about the local sales tax that is usually collected from an in store sale? Does this mean the local community is
	they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10:43em - (*) - View Thread Mike Jacoubowsky - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailecom//trek-begin-online-bike I think Trek is 100% correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The 'net is not going to go away, nor will people change their ways and once again have large chunks of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are busy and we've become 'interrupt driven' with little chunk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, why not wrap it up then? It's crazy to fight that. But If I look over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my SmartE shopping cart, every one of which I intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, 70% of those bikes became something else. Different size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to ride. And that' what makes the difference between actually buying something on-line vs in the store. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Aug 4, 2015 10:39em : ® Ross McNamara - Commented on http://www.bicycleretaileccom//trek-begin-online-bike If bike shops carry less inventory, the excitement created by staff and shared with the consumer will be eroded. Pictures of bikes don't sell bikes, consumers touching and riding bikes in shops drives the industry. There needs to be a balance, I just hope this does not lead to manufacturer owned brick and mortar stores like you see in other industries. The overall industry will suffer and margins will go away. Aug 4, 2015 10:35em : ® John Denson - Commented on http://www.bicycleretaileccom//trek-begin-online-bike Yee ther Kanzier - Commented on http://www.bicycleretaileccom//trek-begin-online-bike Will trek be 'sold out' of
	they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10:43em - () - View Thread Milke Jacoubowsky - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//trek-begin-online-bike I think Trek is 100% correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The 'net is not going to go away, nor will people change their ways and once again have large chunks of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are busy and we've become 'interrupt driven' with ittle chunk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, why not wrap it up then? It's crazy to fight that. But if I look over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my SmartE shopping cart, every one of which I intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, 70% of those bikes became something else. Different size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to fide. And that' what makes the difference between actually buying something on-line vs in the store. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Aug 4, 2015 10:38em - () Ross McNamara - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailec.com//trek-begin-online-bike If bike shops carry less inventory, the excitement created by staff and shared with the consumer will be eroded. Pictures of bikes don't sell bikes, consumers touching and riding bikes in shops drives the industry. There needs to be a balance, I just hope this does not lead to manufacturer owned brick and mortar stores like you see in other industries. The overall industry will suffer and margins will go away. Aug 4, 2015 10:35em - (*) John Denson - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailec.com//trek-begin-online-bike Peter Kanzler - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailec.com//trek-begin-online-bike What about the local they do, some dealers will not be happy. Teck has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10-83am * ® * View Thread Mike Jacoubowsky * Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//frek-begin-online-bike I think firek is 100% correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The 'net is not going to go away, nor will people change their ways and once again have large churks of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are busy and we've become 'interrupt driven' with little chunk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, why not warp it up than? It's crazy to fight that. But if I look over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my Smart£ shopping cart, every one of which I intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, 70% of those bikes became something else. Different size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to ride. And that's what makes the difference between actually buying something on-line via in the store. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Aug 4, 2015 10:39am • the 18 may 19 ma they do, some dealers will not be happy. Tex has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feetback and act appropriately. Ag 4, 2015 10:43am + ® + View Thread Mike Jacoubowsky - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com/_/hrek-begin-online-bike I think Trek is 100% correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The "net is not oping to go away, nor will people change their ways and once again have large chunks of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are busy and weve become "interrupt driver" with little chunk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, why not wrap it up then? It's crazy to fight that. But if I look over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my Smarts shopping cart, every one of which intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, 70% of those bikes became something else. Different size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to ride. And that' what makes the difference between actually buying something on-line vs in the store. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Aug 4, 2015 10:39am + ® Ross McNamara - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailec.com/_/frek-begin-online-bike If bike shops carty less inventory, the excitement created by staff and shared with the consumer will be eroded. Pictures of bikes don't sell bikes, consumers touching and riding bikes in shops drives the industrix. Then needs to the abalance, I just hope this does not lead to manufacturer owned brick and mortar stores like you see in other industries. The overall industry like and shared with the consumer will go away. Aug 4, 2015 9:53am + ® John Denson - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailec.com/_/frek-begin-online-bike Peter Kanzler - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailec.com/_/frek-begin-online-bike What about the local sales tax they do, some dealers will not be happy. Teck has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feetback and act appropriately. Ag 4, 2015 10:43am - ® - View Thread Mike Jacoubowsky - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com/_/frek-begin-online-bike I think Trek is 100% correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The "ne is no doing to go away, nor will people change their ways and once again have large chunks of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are busy and we we become "Interrupt driven" with little chunk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, why not wrap it up then? It's crazy to fight that. But If I look over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my SmartE shopping cart, every one of which I intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, 70% of those bikes became something else. Different size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to rice. And that' what makes the difference between actually buying something on-line vs in the store. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Aug 4, 2015 10:39am - ® Ross McNamara - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com/_/trek-begin-online-bike If bike shops carry less inventory, the excitement created by staff and shared with the consumer will be enoded. Pictures of bikes don't set bikes, consumers touching and riding bikes in shops drives the industry. There needs to be a balance, I just hope this does not lead to manufacturer owned brick and mortar stores like you see in other industries. The overall industry will suffer and margins will go away. Aug 4, 2015 10:35am - ® John Denson - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com/_/trek-begin-online-bike What about the local sales tax that is usually collected from an in store sale? Does this mean the local community is going to they do, some dealers will not be happ. The has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feetback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10.43am + ® + View Thread Mike Jacoubowsky - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com/_/trek-begin-online-bike I think Thek is 100% correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-nine component available. The "net is not going to go away, nor will people change their ways and once again have large chunks of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are busy and we've become 'interrupt drivery' with tittle chunk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, wity not wrap it up then? It's crazy to fight that. But if I look over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my SmartE shopping cart, every one of winch in Intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer." The short what makes the difference between actually buying something on-line vis in the store. We can make the ransaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Aug 4, 2015 10:38am + % Ross McNamara - Commented on http://www.bicycleretaileccom/_tree-begin-online-bike If tible shops carry less inventory, the excitement created by staff and shared with the consumer will be eroded. Pictures of pikes don't sell bikes, consumers touching and riding bikes in shops drives the condustry. There needs to be a balance, I just hope this does not lead to manufacture owned brick and mortar stores like you see in other industries. The overall industry will suffer and margins will go away. Aug 4, 2015 903am + % John Denson - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com/_trek-begin-online-bike What about the local sales tax that is usually collected from an in store sale? Does this mean the local community signing to be out more money for the local bike paths and
	they do, some dealers will not be happy. Trek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feetback and act appropriately. Aug 4, 2015 10.43am + ½ + View Thread Mike Jacoubowsky - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com//rek-begin-online-bike I think Trek is 100% correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-nine component available. The rise is not going to go away, nor will people change their ways and once again have large chunks of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are busy and we've become "interrupt driver" with title chunk of time her and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, wity not wrap it up then? It's crazy to fight that. But if I look over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my SmartE shopping cart, every one of which in Intercepted before actually buring a financial transaction, 70% of those bikes became something else. Different size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to ride. And that's what makes the difference between actually buring something on-line vs in the store. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Aug 4, 2015 10:38am + ½ Aug 4, 2015 10:38am + ½ Aug 5, 2015 10:38am + ½ Aug 6, 2015 10:38am + ½ John Denson + Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com/_/rek-begin-online-bike If Dike shops carry less inventory, the excitement created by staff and shared with the consumer will be eroded. Pleatures of bikes don't see libikes, consumers touching and riding bikes in shops drives the industries. The overall industry will suffer and margins will go away. Aug 4, 2015 23am + ½ John Denson + Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com/_/rek-begin-online-bike Year Levine - Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com/_/rek-begin-online-bike This way to you found that the surface of the provise short of the provise short on the provise short of th they do, some deelers will not be happy. Tesk has been around long enough to recognize the value of calear feedback and act appropriately. Alig 4, 2015 10-3am : % - View Thread Mike Jacoubovsky - Commended on http://www.bioglorestale.com/_hev-begin-online-biae. I think: Tesk is 100 feed cornect that many people prefer to huy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The 'not is not going to go away, nor will people change there ways and one cagain have length churiss of the available for shopping during the day. Use are busy and we've become 'interrupt driven' with little churks of time here and them. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife's asleep, why not wrap it up then? It's crazy to fight that. But if I look over the 30 or so bises that people have placed in my. Smartf. Brooping cart, every one of which i intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, 70% of those bises became something else. Different size, or different model more appropriate for how here ye going to rick. And that's what makes the difference between actually buying something on-line vis in the store. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Alig 4, 2015 10:38m · % Ross McNamara - Commended on http://www.bioglorestale.com/_hev.begin-online-biae. There exists out the set bises, consumers touching and riding bites in shops drives the industry. These needs to be a bilance, I just hope this does not lead to manufacturer owned brick and mortar stores like you see in other floatisties. The overall inclusive will suffer and margins will go away. Alig 4, 2015 10:38m · % Peter Kanzier - Commended on http://www.bioglorestale.com/_hev.begin-online-biae. They aligned - Commended on http://www.bioglorestale.com/_hev.begin-online-biae. Will roke he 'sold out of specific bikes even faster because they hold back inventory for their own use? Where the sold out of specific bikes even faster because t they do, some dealers will not be happy. Tek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. And 4.2015 (16-48m - 16) - Mew Thread Mike Jacoutowalky - Commended on http://www.biopdeestaler.com/_/nesh-bagin-online-bike Think Tek is 1004 (cornect that name) people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The "net is not going to go away, nor will people change there ways and one again have large chunks of time waited for interpret device or people change there ways and one again have large chunks of time waited for interpret growing the day. Lives are buy and we've become "interrupt driven" with little chunk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife a saleen, why not wait to use the product personal. Various of the commended of which intercepted before actually conducting a financial transaction, 70% of those bixes became something else. Different stace, or different stace or different mode fines appropriate for how why going in one. And that what makes the difference between actually buying something or-line via in the store. We can make the management of the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer. See Note And they do, some disalent will not be happy. This has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and cat papoprisely. And, 4.2011 to State *10 * New Trimed Miles Jacobiovally - Commends on http://www.bayceleetaler.com/_/tex-begin-orine-blea_Hinks Revision 10 occurs that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The net is not gring to go away, nor will people dramge their ways and one again have large curries of the available for shopping during the day. Leve are buy and we've become "Interrupt driver" with title churk of time here and them. Maybe at 11:15m the skids are down, he will seapen, with or will be propile have blaced in my Samset's shopping curr, every one of within Interruption there actually conducting a financial transaction. 70% of those times became something else. Offerent size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to rise. And that within Interruption there actually conducting a financial transaction. 70% of those times became something else. Offerent size, or different model more appropriate for how they're going to rise. And that within Interruption the else obtained to the size of the s they do, some dealers will not be happy. Thek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer feedback and act appropriately. And 4.2015 Inclaim - (4) - View Thread Mille Jacoutowsky - Commented on http://www.boycleetake.com/_trek-eigh-onine-bake. Hink: Tex is 1006 correct that many people prefer to buy, or at least have more opportunities to buy, when there is an on-line component available. The not is not going to go away, nor will people change that ways and one again have large chains of time available for shopping during the day. Lives are bury and we've bacome "interrupt driven" with 18th churk of time here and there. Maybe at 11:15pm the kids are down, the wife a saleey, why not warp tup them? In scrazy to fight that. But if 1004 over the 30 or so bikes that people have placed in my Smarts shopping cart, very one of which I interruped before actually conducting a francial transaction. 70% of those bakes become something olse. Difference between actually buying something on-line wis in the one. We can make the transaction, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Nad, 4 2015 1024ms. Production, and more important the product, personal. We can make sure what the customer See More Nad, 4 2015 1024ms. His lake along carry less inventory, the excitement created by staff and shared with the consumer will be reloaded, Pictures of bikes ofto 1 sed liveduce, consuments booking and ringly bikes in arous divises the industry. There needs to be a balance, I just hope this does not lead to manufacturer owned brick and must stores like you use ein other industries. The overall industry will suff and margins will go away. And, 4 2015 1024ms. they do, some disalers will not be happy. Thek has been around long enough to recognize the value of document evolution of appropriately. Appl. 4.2015 16.36 as 16° 1.46 or Thread Miles Jacobossity - Commented on http://www.bicycleestaler.com/_/bes.begin-order-bise they do, some dealers will not be happy. This has been around long enough to recognize the value of document reduction and appropriately. Any 4.2015 1054m; 49: 1989. Thermal Miles Jacobiovsky - Commends on Introdeway subjected to 1989, or all least have more apportunities to buy, when there is an on-time component and intellect. The hirst is not going to go away, nor will people drampe their ways and consequent and the second of the they do, some distance will not be happy. Thek has been around long enough to recognize the value of doctor recorducts and appropriately. Appl. 4, 2015 16-261-16. *Veter Thread More Appl. 16-261-1 they do, some dealers will not be happy. Tech has been around long enough to recognize the value of decider Recibiator and appropriately. Apr. 2.03 is Calcium O. View Thread The extension carry less inventor, be excellented to excellent or inventor in the consumer of the industry Three needs to be a bitation. In the consumer to be industry three thread on the consumer to the they do is, come declare a will not the happy. Their has been around long enough to recognize the value of discrimentation of perspectives. And J. 2019 Science 19.1. View Thread Science 19.1. View Thr they do, some dealers will not be happy. Thek has been around long enough to recognize the value of dealer sections, and of proprietely. And a. Stord Schalam 16.1 Very Very Present And a. Stord Schalam 16.1 Very Very Very Very Very Very Very Very
	The yob, some celeter will not be happy. Then he bown around long enough to recognite the value of color motions and an appropriates. Mark Scholle (Scholler et
	The other Secretary and exploration (secretary to receptive the value of content reception and exploration) and exploration (secretary to receptive the value) and exploration (secretary contents) and expl
	The other investigate and explanation of the properties for what or design explanation and comment of the properties of they do by come clearlers will not be begrey. The has been accurated tong avoiding the recognitude ready. And a Color (1994) are appropriately to the properties of the color (1994) and a Color (1994) are appropriately to the properties of the p they do. Sent ductors will not be happy. The hab been accurate long enough to recoprise the value of desire recipions and appropriately. May all control of their Trivial of the common and the properties to buy, and a sent to the common and the properties to buy, and a sent to the common and the properties to buy, and a sent to the common and the properties to buy, and a sent to the common and they des conditioned with root between the proprietary is not between the education and contract in the contract co they on, some ordered will not be happy. The has been around long analysis to incorporate the value of a some indication, and all operations of the control The data designed and a large prisages. The control of the control of the control between any of the control o the control and set and and being possible the soulder of an activation of the soulder of the so
	The cost of the color of the cost of the c
	The controllers of the city to improve the control of the city to the city of
	The control co
	The cost of the co
	The control of the co
	See on seed or color out in the to regift in the board and of the product in recorded in the color of the color of the color out in the color out of the color
	The control co
	The content of the co
	The control of the co
	The control of the co
	The control of the co
	The cost of the co
	The cost of the co
	The control of the co
	The entire that the property of the property o
	The sign of the control of the contr
	The part of the pa
	The pass of the common and the commo
	Notes, permanent and earth or the complete t

☐ Kaj Grönholm · Commented on http://www.bicycleretailer.com/.../trek-begin-online-bike...